

I was already so impressed by the building, and when I stepped into VARELLI Studios, I felt like I was finally entering a dance space that was tasteful in so many ways. It was bright and spacious, with beautiful light-colored wooden floors. One long wall was covered with mirrors, and the opposite side opened up to a view of Hamburg's old town through large, beautifully designed windows. I always feel that the style of the room sets also the vibe. The place was so inviting that I immediately thought it would be perfect for dance classes, workshops, or music videos.
